

ABSTRACT OF THE INVENTION

A semiconductor integrated circuit which is capable of being manufactured with a higher packing density and a small-size structure of standard cells is described. In the semiconductor integrated circuit, substrate regions and source regions are shared by adjacent standard cells as well as common contact regions which are located inward displaced respectively from the centers of the substrate regions.

10